Lynda was my sister. No, not by blood, but in every way that mattered otherwise. We became best friends in 1979. And she will always be my best friend. We laughed together. We cheered each other on. We cried with one another. There wasn't a secret I had in all these years that I didn't share with her, and I dare say she had many that I didn't know. When her sister called me with the news that Lynda was gone, my heart lost a huge space that Lynda filled. Years ago, we promised each other that we'd always be best friends, and even after death, the first one to Heaven, would wait at the gates for the other to arrive. I know one day, I'll be with her. And just like old friends are wont to do, I know we will strike up conversation, as though we'd never been apart! I love you lady! And i'll miss you every day till I get there to see you! My prayers are for Lynda's family now.
