“ *I stood in silence, words erased,
A heart too full, a mind misplaced.
The weight of loss, too soon, too vast—
I had no time to grasp, to ask.*

*Your absence hung in heavy air,
Yet all I found was blank despair.
No phrase felt right, no comfort clear,
So I stood voiceless, stuck in fear.*

*I hadn't yet begun to grieve,
To gather thoughts, to dare believe
That you were gone, that you were dust—
My tongue was bound in brittle trust.*

*And though I said no soft goodbye,
I hope you felt the silent cry,
For words, they fail, they slip away—
But in my heart, you'll always stay.*
