“ I met Rusty in the Navy Hospital in DaNang in 1967. We were patients there, and he was with a few other of his Marine buddies. As we got to know each other better, he started sharing some letters he received from a very clever friend, and they were always good for a laugh. Rusty had a sharp mind and a quick wit. Our little group hung out together for our entire stay. One day, Rusty and his guys brought me a gift. It was a brass Lance Corporal's uniform adornment. They had decided as a group that I was too good for the Army, so they declared me to be an Honorary Lance Corporal. It was an unforgettable honor for me.

To Rusty's family: I am truly sorry for your loss, and sorry that it took so long for me to get to this point. I had looked for him a number of times in the past, but never connected until recently. Fifty years have gone by like a flash, and I find myself at least seven years too late. I pray that God will bless you all and bring you peace. Rusty will be missed.
